America's South Africa Policy

by

Vernon E. Jordan, Jr.

Rational discussion about America's policy options in South Africa got a boost by the recent publication of the Report of the Study Commission on U.S. Policy Toward Southern Africa.

The Commission, an independent group of prestigious citizens chaired by the President of the Ford Foundation, Franklin A. Thomas, provides solid analysis of a knotty subject in a report appropriately titled: "South Africa: Time Running Out."

Time is running our, for that nation's racial situation is deteriorating faster than anyone cares to admit. The ignoble experiment of 4.5 million whites ruling 23 million non-whites was always doomed to failure, especially since that rule was brutal, exploitative, and firmly based on theories of racial superiority.

The apartheid system can only sicken any civilized human being, and South Africa's rulers have forfeited any claim to consideration for a system of racial oppression.

For Americans, it has never been enough merely to say we don't like apartheid and to let it go at that. America's pretensions to world leadership, its far-reaching network of military and diplomatic alliances that have traditionally included South Africa, its principles of human rights and, in theory at least, racial equality, all make police toward South Africa important to us.

And beyond such considerations is South Africa's important strategic position and its possession of important minerals.

For all of these reasons, America's policy options toward South Africa have veered toward a middle road of lip service against apartheid but little action to make that country's rulers modify their positions.

But time is running our, and middle-of-the-road waffling will not preserve our longterm interests is the region, nor will the current Administration's friendly tilt toward the white minority government help us in the long run.

That's why the Report of the Commission is so valuable. It takes all factors into consideration and suggests a unified policy that is in America's self-interest and supports black power-sharing in South Africa.

The Report suggests America demonstrate its "fundamental and continuing opposition" to apartheid, through diplomatic actions and private sector acts.

While the Commission stops short of asking U.S. corporations to close up their operations there, it does say they should make no new investments, refuse to expand operations, subscribe to the "Sullivan Principles" of social responsibility toward the black majority and commit their resources to improving the lives of black South Africans.

That strikes me as an appropriate response, and a workable one that would impact on South African society even if it does not go as far as some would like.

The Report urges American promotion of genuine power-sharing by "systematically exerting influence on the South African government." It backs pressures such as a broadened embargo on arms sales, an end to nuclear coop eration, and withholding econ omic aid and diplomatic recognition for the mini-states South Africa has set up to split the black population.

The Report wisely suggest more U.S. economic aid to South Africa's neighbors, to reduce their dependence on the racist state.

Last but far from least, the Report calls for support for organizations working for change in South Africa, and aid in black economic and political development programs.

Sooner or later the black majority in South Africa will overthrow racist rule. Our stake in the region is too big to be perceived as an enemy of freedom for South Africa's majority. Clearly, it is America's political and moral responsibility to help guide the future development of that unhappy country toward a peaceful resolution of its problems. Time is running out.

HAPPINESS THROUGH HEALTH
By Otto McClarrin

PORTRAIT OF THE PLIGHT OF THE ELDERLY: The nation's elderly are healthier and live longer on average than ever before. Nevertheless they are far more likely to suffer from disease or disabling conditions than younger people.

The annual death rate, the most widely available measure of health, has declined considerably in recent years for older people. From 1950-1975, according to the National Center for Health Statistics, the death rate for those 65 and over declined by 13%. Thus, by 1975, a person could look forward to 16 more years of life after a 65th birthday, on average.

Substantial declines in two of the three leading causes of death -- heart disease and strokes -- accounted for most of the decrease in mortality of the elderly. In contrast, the mortality rate for cancer, the second leading cause of death, has increased slowly.

Death rates have been consistently higher among elderly men than women, and this gap is growing wider. At the turn of the century, the death rate for men 65 and over was 6% higher than that for women. It was 41% higher by 1965 and 47% higher a decade later.

"Aging is a process that continues over the entire lifespan at differing rates among different people," noted Mary Grace Kovar in a portrait of the health of the elderly published several years ago by the National Center for Health Statistics. "The rate of aging varies among populations and among individuals in the same population," though age 65 is the most widely accepted beginning of old age.

The elderly, generally speaking, suffer from the same maladies that afflict the younger population, only more so.

HEART DISEASE, for example, accounts for 44% of the deaths of those 65 and over. In the 45-54 age category, heart disease accounts for 32% of the deaths, while in the 55-64 category, the rate is 38 percent.

CANCER causes 19% of the deaths of the elderly, and strokes another 13%. Influenza and pneumonia, the fourth leading cause, account for three percent of the deaths of the elderly men and women. For men the fifth leading cause is a cluster of conditions grouped under bronchitis, emphysema and asthma; accidents rank sixth. Arteriosclerosis is fifth for women, while diabetes is sixth, Kovar reported.

Chronic conditions afflict the elderly far more often than they do younger people. The most frequently reported chronic conditions and impairments for the elderly living outside of institutions are arthritis, vision and hearing problems, heart conditions and hyp[illegible]ension. The reported prevalence rate for each of these conditions is 20% or higher; [illegible] have arthristis. Prevalence rates for all of these conditions are higher in non-[illegible]ropolitan areas than in the cities and are higher in the South than in other regions of the United States.

The sickest of the elderly generally reside in nursing homes. These elderly individuals -- some four percent of the total aging population -- suffer from multiple chronic conditions. Almost two-thirds are senile, 36% have heart problems and 14% suffer from diabetes.

About a third are confined to beds or chairs, according to government statistics. Almost half cannot see well enough to read an ordinary newspaper regardless of whether they wear glasses; 35% cannot hear a conversation on an ordinary telephone and 24% have impaired speech.

Loss of sensory ability frequently accompanies aging. About 92% of all elderly individuals living in the community wear glasses; five percent wear hearing aids. The ability to taste, smell and adapt to darkness also undergoes a decline as people grow older.

TIPS ON TRIPS

Traveling With Children

The delightful thing about traveling with kids is watching their sense of delight. A trip to the zoo is pretty sure to bring that out. Visitors to Milwaukee can take their children to one of the top zoos in the world, with a world of wildlife including Samson, Milwaukee's famous gorilla and 6,000 other animals.

Children who like sports can watch Milwaukee Brewer baseball, basketball with the Bucks, and pack it in with the Green Bay Packers who play half their home games in that beautiful city. There's also professional hockey with the Admirals making it a year 'round spectator sport paradise.

Your children can take special joy in the great outdoors because Milwaukee is a town for all seasons. It has the sweep of Lake Michigan at its front door and minutes from downtown are 115 well-groomed county parks with over 14,000 lush Wisconsin acres. Inflation - Fighting IDEAS

TIPS TO HELP YOU

With inflation mounting and mortgage money drying up, many families are finding that remodeling makes more sense than moving out.

To accommodate all the activity, durable, easy-to-maintain flooring is almost a must. Mannington's new marble and tile design, Drexel Hill, a resilient floor covering, is ideal for high-traffic areas. A never-wax floor, it cleans with vinegar and water and is available in a variety of colors to enhance any room.

In many older homes, simply eliminating the wall that separates the kitchen and the dining room will provide one large, multi-use space rather than two narrowly specialized ones.

Paulette Payne's Record Review

By Paulette Payne

This column is for everyone who enjoys music. And especially for those of you, who like myself, have bought an album and finds out that the song you like, is, the only song on the album you like. So therefore, the two albums being focused on this week are "Nard", and "Dimples".

"Nard" is the product of an exceptionally talented young brother named Bernard Wright. The young man is just sweet sixteen with musical ability coming at you stating loudly that this brother must have been somewhere before. Bernard demostrates his array of talent with writing and arranging to the mature way he massages the piano on his deput album. The cuts "Music is the Key", "Just chillin' Out", and "Master Rocker" are all excellent. The other cuts deserve the same credit. This is one album every household should have.

"Dimples" is by Richard "Dimples" Fields. It's the type of album that has something for everyone. Side one is nice and light, it's not real hard disco but you can dance to it. Betty Wright lends her talent on two cuts "Let me take you in my arms tonight" and "She's got papers on me." And as always she tells you where shes coming from. Richard does a fantastic job to the Penguins' "Earth Angel" thats sure to make you reminise.

Both albums will add spice to your record collection, as well as to your ear. So check them out. Until next week, remember that music is the universal language.

Peaches & Herb Hit The Soaps

Polydor/PolyGram Records recording artists Peaches & Herb, whose brand-new single, "Freeway," is already climbing the R & B charts in anticipation of their new album, Saying Something, recently made a cameo appearance on the popular ABC-TV soap opera, The Edge of Night. The duo played themselves in a night-club scene where they sang their hit song, "I Pledge My Love."

BLACK EMPOWERMENT

By Dr. Nathaniel Wright, Jr.
Human Rights Activist

Blacks—and the nation's poor generally—are taking an increasingly serious beating in the nation's mounting energy crisis.

Much of the fault rests not with the fuel companies, but with public policy makers and blacks themselves. Unfortunately, most of the really desperate pinch of the energy crisis may be felt by the black community when it is considerably late in the game.

When some black Americans are paying—as some are doing at present—more than 80 percent of their income on fuel, there should be more than enough reason for all of us to be alarmed.

Blacks generally are estimated to be paying more than twice what they ought to be paying for fuel. Blacks, it is said, complain, on the one hand; but, on the other hand, they do not seem to mind paying exorbitantly (or at least in a grossly disproportionate way) for far too costly winter fuel. They seem to do little—as with Americans generally—to seriously conserve on heat.

WET AND DRY AIR HEATING

The use of heat is as much a psychological matter as it is a physiological matter. People with deep emotional needs tend to require considerably more heat than do those whose emotional needs are less. Thus, institutions tend to overheat, since their residents find normal temperatures to be uncomfortable.

But, even here, there is more to institutional overheating than meets the eye. Institutions, so some heating experts point out, do not pay nearly the kind of attention to humidifying (or mixing water in) the heated air that they should.

Whenever people are subjected to extremely "dry heat," their body's skin pores are dried out, creating the sensation of being cold; and there is an accompanying greater need for added heat.

What is said here suggests that if a concerted effort were to be made to encourage the use of humidifiers—possibly even subsidizing them on a one-time basis—much of our continuing outlay for fuel subsidies would be unnecessary.

Most homes of black Americans have "dry heat," that is, heat that is not sufficiently mixed with moisture. Dry heat costs from two to three times what moist heat costs. Further, it is less comfortable and far less healthy.

If one's home is in a typical hard water (i.e., water with high mineral content) area, one's automatic humidifier on a furnace would need to have its filter changed and washed at least once every two weeks. When left unchanged for any longer period, the thoroughly clogged filter simply cannot do the job it was intended to do. We thus simply fool ourselves.

For the greatest fuel economies, the use of several portable type humidifiers are often the most efficient. The average 7 to 8 room house might need to have its two humidifiers filled at least once each day. This lets us have a pretty clear indication that moisture is being put into the air. When we add six to eight gallons of water to our humidifiers, we know that a like amount of water has been used to provide one's home with the big dollar-saving moistened air.

The primary difference which well-moistened air makes in fuel savings is suggested by the fact that with the proper humidity one's thermostat may be lowered as much as ten degrees and one may feel infinitely warmer and more comfortable than at the higher setting with dry air.

While much more might be said about how moistened air bathes our bodies, protects our furniture and our clothing and enables us to lower our thermostat settings, the "bottom line" is seen in the fact that an $800 fuel bill may be lowered to $400...or even less when properly moistened air is the rule.

For about $4.00, a humidiguide (or humidity indicator) may be purchased which tells us the temperature inside the house and the accompanying percentage of humidity. An old-fashioned but still adequate rule is to keep the humidifier going high—or the kettle of water for humidification simmering on the stove—until moisture just begins to settle on the windows. At that point, one simply turns the humidifier down so that the moisture disappears...but does not turn the humidifier off.

As a matter of public policy and of civic concern, we need to recognize that using fuel properly moistened is best for ourselves and best for the fuel supply of the country.

While many of our fuel subsidies are greatly needed, we "put the cart before the horse" when we fail as a matter of course to educate our public on how to be far more healthy and comfortable on far less fuel from the very start.

CANCER Answer line

American Cancer Society

A regular feature, prepared by the American Cancer Society, to help save your life from cancer.

Question. "Is there really a risk of a non-smoker developing cancer from working in an office full of cigarette smoke?"

ANSWERline: We still don't know whether exposure to second-hand smoke results in cancer or other diseases, but recent studies indicate that smoke-filled rooms are far from healthy. One study, reported in the New England Journal of Medicine, involved more than 2,000 smokers and non-smokers. Results showed that the nonsmokers inhaling other people's smoke had the same lung damage as light smokers or smokers who do not inhale The damage affected the small airway passages of the lungs, but the effect of that damage to a person's health is not yet known Lung damage to average and heavy smokers was far worse Another study showed that a smoke-filled room needs six times as much air circulated per hour as one without cigarette smoke, in order to maintain the same amount of oxygen

Question "I'm 23 years old and one of my friends tells me it's important for young women my age to have regular Pap tests to check for cervical cancer. I thought that cancer affected only women over 35

ANSWERline: Your friend is right All women 20 years of age and older, and younger women who are sexually active, are susceptible to cervical cancer. You should get a Pap test at least every three years, once you've had two initial negative tests one year apart. The Pap test is important because it is extremely accurate in detecting cervical cancer while the cancer is still in an early, localized stage. That's when chances of cure are best. The other form of uterine cancer – endometrial cancer – affects mainly older women. A special tissue sampling is recommended at menopause, as part of a complete pelvic exam. Also recommended is a pelvic examination every three years from age 20 to 40, and annually thereafter.

Delta Sigma Theta Convention

Mona H. Bailey, (left) National President of Delta Sigma Sorority, Inc., raises her hand in jubiliation at the conclusion of the organization's triumph march down Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington, D.C. to the steps of the U.S. Capitol Building where marchers offered prayers to the nation in an ecumenical service. Shown with Bailey, who was elected to a second two-year term at the convention, are Winona Cargile Alexander, 89, of Jacksonville, Fla., and Bertha Pitts Campbell, 92, of Seattle, Washington. Both women were founding members of Delta in 1913 on the campus of Howard University and marched in a suffragette parade down Pennsylvania Avenue the same year.

It Was Homecoming!

From 42 states, including Alaska, the Republic of West Germany, the Bahamas and the Virgin Islands, members of the family, more than 9,000 strong, converged on Washington,D.C. strong, converged on Washington,D.C.

They were one with, yet separate from, the crowds in train, airport and bus terminals as they alighted from their conveyances.

They were, in a word, Deltas --members of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc., which was founded on the campus of Howard University in 1913. Two of the founding members of the organization, 93-year-old Bertha Pitts Campbell and 89-year-old Winona Cargile Alexander and 13 past presidents joined their sisters at the convention.

"This, our 36th national gathering, was by far the largest convention the Deltas have held," said Mrs. Mona H. Bailey, national president, who also noted that hotel officials had told her that the Delta convention was the largest black convention to be held in the nation's capital in recent years.

A resident of Seattle, Washington, Bailey was elected to a second two-year term by convention delegates. She is also Assistant State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Division of Special and Equal Education Programs in Washington.

Other national incumbent officers were: Mrs. Hortense G. Canady, Lansing, Michigan, National First Vice President; Dr. Shirle M. Childs, Windsor, Connecticut, National Secretary; and Ms. Lorine S. Samuels, New Lennox, Illinois, National Treasurer.

Newly elected members to the National Executive Board were Ms. Linda C. Redd, Chicago, Illinois, National Second Vice President (undergraduate) and Mrs. Letitia Byrd, Ann Arbor, Michigan, Chair, National Nominating Committee.

A direct and forceful speaker, Bailey said the purpose of the convention was not to draw up more agendas and issue calls to action but to get on with the business of bringing about black parity in American society.

"I wish to push aside the sterility of more calls to actions and more agendas for the 80's," she declared. "I am urging that in each community whereever we are gathered in the name of Delta, let us put into operation a seven-point program as part of our National Campaign for Self-Determination."

Baileys program, which was adopted by the convention, covered the following areas.

1. Requesting that a payroll deduction plan which would include a black charity such as the Black United Fund, the United Negro College Fund or the National Scholarship and Services Fund by Deltas in their work place.

2. Organizing Black United Funds in communities where there is none with Delta helping to provide a national resource person from the Fund to assist in organization.

3. Investing in black organizational church funds and in black financial institutions with a proven track record of excellence and portfolio enhancement.

4. Organizing black financial instituions in black communities where there are none.

5. Participation of Delta women in insisting, demanding and requiring that black women be an integral part of the drive for black political parity and supporting black elected officials who have mobilized to protect, preserve and enhance black parity in public office with the goal of sensitizing them to include black women as part of their representation.

6. Urge that black women be assigned prominent executive and supervisory roles which reflect the composition of the school population and that school systems with a black majority include black women as candidates for school superintendents.

7. Gathering together black women to close ranks with those family and religious institutions which have programs to strenghten the sinews of the black family.

"When I proposed the adoption of this seven-point program for national self-determination for black community, I was not seduced by the cosmetics of separatism," said Bailey.

She continued, "Self-determination does not mean alienation from our allies and persons of good will in other communities. We must continue to maintain the closest of ties with our friends in the Labor and women's organizations. As we work hand-in-had with them, we also raise their consciousness."

Bailey said there was "nothing new" about her seven-point program and added that "it is as much a part of the American dream as the self-determination successes of this nation's inventive geniuses."

Bailey paused, apparently reflecting on the five-day conventin and what it meant as a whole rather than just a gathering of black women who had come together to talk about pressing problems.

"No, it was more, much more, than that," Bailey declared.

A high point of the convention, according to Bailey, was a session with the major black leaders of diverse organizations -- Dr. Dorothy Height, Rev. Jesse Jackson, Rev. Joseph Lowery, Carl Holman, Eddie N. Williams, Faye B. Bryant, Edith V. Francis and Dr. Oliver Gumbs --"to reaffirm our commitment to the march of black progress and to formulate strategies to keep the march in motion."

She noted that the convention acted on 18 resolutions in the closing session and outlined three which she said were "high priorities."

"The extension of the Voting Rights Act must come about. There will be no equivocation or concilliation on this point. Support for historically black colleges and universities must continue unabated. Again, no quarter can be given. And we must strive, now more than ever, for economic security and social, economic, social and political parity for black women," declared Bailey.

The convention is ended and the women of Delta have left Washington to return to their work places in the home, laboratories, medical centers and corporate offices.

"We have not yet succeeded in educating the public to a just appreciation of us because we have not yet succeeded in educating ourselves to a just application of power.

"That power can come alive, in a searing incandescene across the heavens, if we leave here as black women wedded to the ideal that black self-determination is the forerunner of a new spendor."

Heat Prostration

Let's briefly discuss Heat Prostration. This is exhaustion and collapse caused by oveexposure to heat. The temperature of the body is normally kept from rising above 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit by the cooling effect of evaporation. When the temperature outside the body is high a great deal of water is lost in perspir outside the body is high, a great deal of water is lost in perspiration. As the fluid volume in the body decreases, the circulation of the blood is affected.

Heat Prostration is especially likely to occur in persons with poor circulation, but even a person in good health can suffer the same effects if the coolin system of the body is overworked. The skin becomes pale and clammy; there is weakness, dizziness, headache, and stupor.

Heat Prostration can be prevented by avoiding excessive activity in hot weather and drinking enough fluids to take care of extra losses through persiration.

See you next week. Have a nice summer.

Seahawks Travel To San Francisco

The Seattle Seahawks will try and reverse an early pre-season decision when they meet the San Francisco 49ers Saturday in a 6 p.m. game at Candlestick Park.

The 49ers scored a 27-24 overtime victory when Ray Wersching hit a 39-yard field goal on August 5 in the first meeting between the two teams this year.

Seattle will be looking for its first victory of the pre-season after dropping a 30-21 game to St. Louis last week, while the 49ers are 1-1. San Francisco lost to San Diego, 31-28, last week.

"We will prepare more for San Francisco as a team than we did the first time we met," says Seattle head coach Jack Patera. "It makes it easier to prepare, too, because we've played them already.

"You know a little more about what to expect and prepare more of a game plan," he says. "San Francisco will do a lot more against us, too,"

In the first meeting, San Francisco built up a 24-10 lead early in the fourth quarter and then reserve quarterback Dave Krieg rallied the Seahawks to a 24-24 tie at the end of regulation.

Krieg rallied the Seahawks to a second half comeback against the Cardinals last week, too.

Trailing 20-7 late in the third period, Krieg threw a pair of touchdown passes -- a 56 yarder to Paul Johns and a 12-yarder to Jeff Moore -- to give the Seahawks a temporary 21-20 lead.

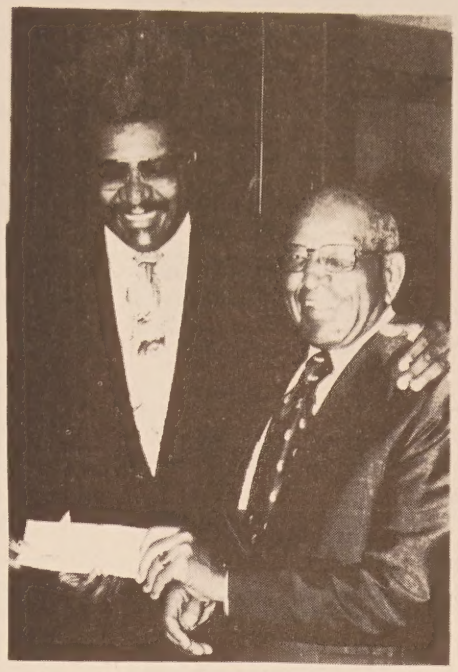
"It is very exciting to see Dave Krieg come in and move the ball," says Patera. Against the Cardinals, Krieg was 5 of 9 for 113 yards. He completed nine of 13 for 101 yards against the 49ers.

"I'm more confident and ready to play this year," says Krieg, a second year performer from Milton College. "I have a better knowledge of our offense and I know what we're trying to accomplish."

The 6-1, 185-pounder likens his current role to coming out of the bullpen.

"While I'm on the bench," says Krieg, "I can see what the defense is doing, see what coverages they are in on down and distance situations and I know what plays (Jerry) Rhome is calling. It's kind of like a relief pitcher looking at the hitters before he comes in the game."

Donald Kings Gives NNPA Archives $10,000



Cleveland, Ohio: The Archives Committee of the National Newspaper Publishers Association, through its chairman, William O. Walker, has received a contribution of $10,000 from fight promoter Donald King.

In making his gift, Mr. King expressed his interest in the Archives project which was established in 1973 at Howard University.

The Archives is expected to become the primary facility in the world for research related to the history of the Black press.

As a part of the joint project between Howard University and NNPA, a Gallery of Distinguished Newspaper publishers has been established in the Mooreland-Spingarn Research Center, where portraits of Black publishers are enshrined and can be viewed by the public. Copies of Black newspapers are sent to the Archives center each week for microfilming and for research reference. Dr. Michael R. Winsont is director of the Mooreland-Spingarn Research Center.

America's Favorite BB Gun

After being right on target for 65 years, one of the most popular BB guns in America is being retired.

For 65 years, more than twenty million young Americans learned target shooting with the Daisy model BB pump gun.

The 20 millionth Daisy model 25 air gun, after ceremonies at the 1980 Shot Show, will be placed in a conspicuous position in a display case at the National Rifle Association Museum in Washington, D.C.

The model 25 is being replaced by a sleek, new Daisy 840 one-stroke pump action gun, which holds 350 BB-s or a single pellet. It has been especially designed for youth and has an adjustable sight and trigger safety.

Houses in Georgetown, the capital of Guyana, are built on piles since the city is below the high-tide mark.

Learn, Baby, Learn

By Pepper Murray

Each person has a unique excellence just waiting to find its avenue for expression. That's a very true statement, and if you agree, you realize that education is a form of obtaining, gaining, and using that excellence. That doesn't only include formal or specialized training, but all forms of education even the basics.

It is imperative that all of America's people understand that their country was built by the hands and minds of plain and magnificent men and women, from many national, religious, ethnic and cultural backgrounds. Believe it or not that's basic information. Sure its that same old line about education you hear and how important it is, but stop for one moment and think about the real reasons for education (may be to learn more about the system we live in and how we can make it work for us).

That should also be basic information and education.

We often think of education only in terms of formal training courses. There are many ways that people learn, and often people learn better if their training includes a variety of learning experiences. However, it is increasingly necessary that parents, preachers, and teachers continue working with and within the American system to liberate our children and ourselves at every and all educational levels. Courses and training relevant to meeting individual goals come in lots of shapes and sizes. And there are thousands of books that describe them.

Education is important we all know, and it is the beginning of the "education season." The emphasis is on not only education, but learning in general. Information about our country, our community, ourselves. Because education is about learning and increasing our information about our situation in our society, which means knowledge to improve our position in our society. Sound complicated, well think of it this way, the more we learn the more we know, the more we know the better we use the system to achieve our goals.

So, no matter what you are doing come the start of the "education season" there are plenty of ways to be involved in education and learning. College course, vocational-technical schools, public and private school systems, seminars, church, and the list goes on and on. And don't forget no matter how young or old we may be, or who we do or do not work for there is financial assistance available to help further formal education-regardless of what method of education choosen. It may take some time and effort. Listed are a few places that you can obtain information on further education and training:

Tacoma Community College 756-5000; Fort Steilacoon Community College, 964-6500; Clover Park Vocational/Technical Institute, 584-7311; University of Puget Sound, 756-3100; Pacific Lutheran University, 531-6900; L.H. Bates Vocational/Technical Institute, 597-7220; Tacoma Public Library, 572-6760.

Education and learning never stop, we as individuals supply our own flow of information. There are numerous places and resources of information on education and learning. Education is information, and in the re-vamped words of the Rev. Jesse Jackson..."it always was, and so it shall be, more about 'learn, baby, learn!' than about anything else."

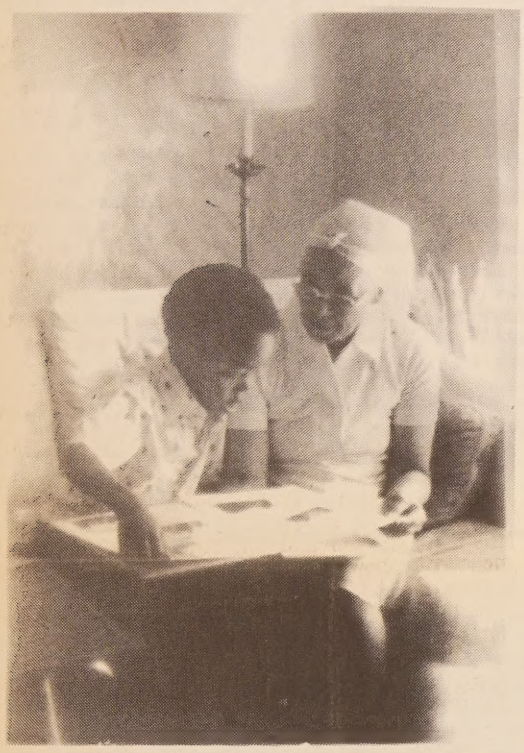
Sharing Of Learning



It's a generation get-together that has always been vital to the Black community. This photograph by David Terrell of Atlanta expresses the true meaning of the nation's newest official holiday, "Grandparents Day", which this year falls on Sept. 13.
the National Council for Grandparents Day awarded this one first prize in 1980. Mike Goldgar, Exec. Secretary, said: "Mr. Terrell caught the very essence of our new holiday in one single click."

School doors will soon be open. Many students will be new, entering into another grade, school, or just another room. What will go on in school this year? What will our children learn?What kind of voice will us parents use this year to help to insure quality education and cooperation from both the teacher and the student.Next week we will hear from some of the teachers and students as well as administrative staff of public and private educational institutions as they voice their expectations for this coming semester.

Next month a new school will be opening in our midst. New Jerusalem Christian Academy located at 1623 South 11th Street will begin its first year. The cost is nominal, $55 per month. Presently applications are being accepted for children ages 4 to 12 years. For more information, call 572-6785now or read next weeks Facts newspaper.

MOST FIRES ARE CAUSED BY PEOPLE

Most forest and range wildfires in Washington State result from carelessness, according to Keep Washington Green.

"Year in and year out, KWG statistics show that smokers and camp fire builders account for about 40 percent of all man-caused wildfires," said Bill Larson, KWG Director.

Debris burning ranks second. About one-quarter of the fires caused by people in recent years have resulted from debris burning fires spreading beyond intended limits.

Larson said logging operators, who have jobs and equipment at stake every time fire breaks out are responsible for only about 4 per cent of the annual fires. A similar percentage is attributed to railroad causes.

Children playing with fire and matches often cause up to 10 per cent of the annual forest fires attributed to people. And from 8 to 10 per cent are due to incendiarism.

People start more fires than nature. Through the years about 75 per cent of all forest and range wildfires are due to people causes. Lightning accounts for about 25 per cent.
